OF
THE PUBLICATIONS
OF
J. C. JUTA
and
J. C. JUTA & Co.

This is not a comprehensive bibliography of Juta publications for the period 1853 to 1903; indeed we doubt whether it is a complete record of the publications to be found in Juta's records and no attempt has been made to trace publications in other centers. Certain sources in Cape Town have not been investigated at all—for example, advertisements in newspapers were not sought for beyond 1863 and then the search was confined to four newspapers, published in Cape Town. A check on some of the advertisements that were found revealed that 1853–1903 hardly advertised at all in the Eastern Province during this period, but a similar check on the Dutch papers originating in Cape Town held more promise. But these researchers were abandoned in favor of the more fruitful fields of Africana collections and periodicals by A.B. Caine and L. Leipoldt.

In this work, and to some extent advertisements, proved to be a valuable source of information as there was often no clear distinction made between the bookselling and book-publishing functions of local firms. Many items described "To be had of Mr. Juta" or "To be had of all booksellers" have been omitted from this bibliography as there was so little evidence that they had actually been published.

Preface

This is not a comprehensive bibliography of Juta publications for the period 1853 to 1903; indeed we doubt whether it is a complete record of the publications to be found in Juta's records and no attempt has been made to trace publications in other centers. Certain sources in Cape Town have not been investigated at all—for example, advertisements in newspapers were not sought for beyond 1863 and then the search was confined to four newspapers, published in Cape Town. A check on some of the advertisements that were found revealed that 1853–1903 hardly advertised at all in the Eastern Province during this period, but a similar check on the Dutch papers originating in Cape Town held more promise. But these researchers were abandoned in favor of the more fruitful fields of Africana collections and periodicals by A.B. Caine and L. Leipoldt.

In this work, and to some extent advertisements, proved to be a valuable source of information as there was often no clear distinction made between the bookselling and book-publishing functions of local firms. Many items described "To be had of Mr. Juta" or "To be had of all booksellers" have been omitted from this bibliography as there was so little evidence that they had actually been published.

This is not a comprehensive bibliography of Juta publications for the period 1853 to 1903; indeed we doubt whether it is a complete record of the publications to be found in Cape Town - and no attempt has been made to trace publications in other centres. Certain sources in Cape Town have not been investigated at all - for example, advertisements in newspapers were not sought for beyond 1883 and then the search was confined to four newspapers, published in Cape Town. A check on some of the advertisements thus found revealed that Juta's hardly advertised at all in the Eastern Province during this period, but a similar check on the Dutch papers originating in Cape Town held more promise. But these researches were abandoned in favour of the more fruitful fields of Africana collections and periodicals of the time. Here were examined other than Reviews, and to a lesser extent advertisements, proved to be a trying source of information as there was often no clear distinction made between the bookselling and book-publishing functions of local firms. Many items described "To be had of Mr. Juta" or "To be had of all booksellers" have been omitted from this bibliography as there was so little evidence that they had actually been published by Juta's. Examples of such advertisements will be found in this bibliography in Supplement A; there are others such as item 117 which would also have been better placed in Supplement A.
Arrangement. The bibliography has been arranged in broad subject order (shown in the list of contents) with an alphabetic index to facilitate reference to specific items.

Supplement A covers items which we felt might have been published by Juta's but which we had not traced elsewhere and therefore had no confirmation that they had actually been published or that they had been published under the Juta imprint.

Supplement B covers publications which had been inadvertently omitted from the main body of the bibliography or which were discovered after the relative section had been typed.

A chronological index has been added in view of the interest evoked by the Juta centenary in 1953.

Maps: Maps bearing the Juta imprint were extremely difficult to find and none were found in the map collections of the Jagger Library (Geography Department) or the South African Public Library despite a very careful search.

Few of the works recorded here were examined other than those which had not yet been classified in the libraries to which we had access. Location marks have been added wherever these were available in order to facilitate access to users of this bibliography. The mark of the library most readily accessible to the public has been selected.

Finally we wish to acknowledge with many thanks the assistance we received from the Librarians and Staffs of the following libraries:
The J.W. Jagger Library;
The Library of Parliament;
The Provincial Administration Education Department Library;
The South African Public Library;
Sources Consulted VI - VII.
The Supreme Court Library.

We also wish to thank Mr. R.F. Immelman allowing us to enjoy the facilities of his private library.

"This map 22 x 30 inches, well printed and coloured, has been compiled from best available information in the Surveyor-General's office, and can therefore be said to be the most correct map of those parts of the colony."

Size: 52 x 43 inches; in four sheets, coloured.
On mahogany rollers or mounted cloth in quarto case.
Scale: 133 miles to 1 inch.
Advertised in the Cape Monthly Magazine of September, 1879. In addition to the above information, the advertisement reads: "... only recent map of Africa on a large scale published in this country. It has been band for upwards of two years, and it now embodies all that is known of Africa up to day of going to press. All recent coast surveys have been taken advantage of; it shows all the political divisions in the interior of the country, as far as known, as well as the settlements or colonies on the coast, the nationalities being distinguished by various colours. The discoveries of all travellers from earliest date to most recent explorations are carefully laid down, whilst the physical features are distinctly exhibited. The mountains have elevations marked in English feet, and a section is given extending across the continent from Benguela to Bagawoyo.
A.K. Johnston, Edinburgh and London; Juta, Cape Town, 1879."
