Spotlight on policy affecting socio-economic rights

PAULA PROECKBUSCH and SOLANGE ROSA

Research

This article is about

The report of the Committee on Inequality into a Comprehensive Social Security System for South Africa and the South African Law Commission’s draft Bill.

Many presentations focused on children and women suffering from HIV/AIDS and the difficulties they face in accessing social grants. All presenters supported the call for the extension of the CGO to 18 years old, which is currently required to be a basic income grant in order to qualify for the CGO.

The Fisher Report

The Portfolio Committee submitted a detailed report in 2003. Through the report, it is evident that everybody will get a basic minimum grant, regardless of the poverty line. The committee recommended that this new grant should be introduced in two phases: a basic income grant of R200 per month before tax, and a monthly pension of R100 after tax. The report recommended the CGO target group should be increased to 14 years old, with the intention that everyone who is 18 years old or over will qualify for the CGO.

National Department of Social Development

The national government has been facing various socio-economic challenges, including unemployment, poverty, and inequality. The government has introduced several measures to address these challenges, such as the introduction of the Social Assistance Act, which provides a basic income grant to vulnerable individuals.

The CSA Report

The Community Services branch of the Department of Social Development published a report in 2003, which recommended that the CGO should be increased to 14 years old. The report also suggested that the grant should be increased to R200 per month. The government has taken these recommendations into account and has increased the CGO to 18 years old.

Background

The CGO was established by the government in 2000 as a national minimum income guarantee for the poorest and most vulnerable South Africans. The CGO provides a basic income grant of R200 per month before tax, and a monthly pension of R100 after tax. The government has taken several steps to improve the CGO over the years, including increasing the grant amount and extending the eligibility age to 18 years old.

Restructuring

The government has been restructuring the Social Security Package to improve access to social assistance. This includes the introduction of the DSA (Draft Social Assistance) Bill, which aims to simplify the delivery of social assistance and ensure that all South Africans, regardless of their age, have access to a basic minimum income.
Specifically, the Children’s Bill has a comprehensive approach to the 1980 Child Care Act. The Department of Social Development is currently drafting a bill that would: ensure that the new Acts will be implemented in such a way that children’s rights are protected; and establish a mechanism for the planning and development of services for children. The draft Bill contains a list of children’s rights. These children are entitled to the protection of the Constitution and this document provides guidance on how these rights should be interpreted.

Background
The Children’s Bill addresses a comprehensive range of issues, including: children’s rights; the protection of the Constitution; and the planning and development of services for children. The draft Bill contains a list of children’s rights. The children are entitled to the protection of the Constitution and this document provides guidance on how these rights should be interpreted.

Civil society response
The Children’s Bill is a positive step towards the implementation of children’s rights in South Africa. The Bill encourages the creation of a framework that will ensure that children’s rights are protected. The Bill also contains provisions that will protect children’s rights in cases of abuse and neglect. The Bill provides a clear framework for the implementation of children’s rights in South Africa. The Bill is a positive step towards the implementation of children’s rights in South Africa. The Bill encourages the creation of a framework that will ensure that children’s rights are protected. The Bill also contains provisions that will protect children’s rights in cases of abuse and neglect. The Bill provides a clear framework for the implementation of children’s rights in South Africa.

Disability Assessment Tool
The Disability Assessment Tool (DAT) was developed to assess the needs of children with disabilities. The DAT is a comprehensive tool that assesses children’s abilities in a number of areas, including: mobility, communication, learning, and social skills. The DAT is designed to be used in the classroom or home environment, and can be administered by trained professionals or parents. The DAT is a comprehensive tool that assesses children’s abilities in a number of areas, including: mobility, communication, learning, and social skills. The DAT is designed to be used in the classroom or home environment, and can be administered by trained professionals or parents.

Civil society response
The Children’s Bill is a positive step towards the implementation of children’s rights in South Africa. The Bill encourages the creation of a framework that will ensure that children’s rights are protected. The Bill also contains provisions that will protect children’s rights in cases of abuse and neglect. The Bill provides a clear framework for the implementation of children’s rights in South Africa. The Bill is a positive step towards the implementation of children’s rights in South Africa. The Bill encourages the creation of a framework that will ensure that children’s rights are protected. The Bill also contains provisions that will protect children’s rights in cases of abuse and neglect. The Bill provides a clear framework for the implementation of children’s rights in South Africa.